

MANUAL WHEELCHAIR

A photograph of a doctor in a light blue coat and stethoscope around his neck, leaning over to assist an elderly man with a beard. The man is seated in a manual wheelchair, and the doctor's hands are on the man's arms, providing support. The background is a soft-focus clinical setting.

Manual wheelchair is defined as a manually operated device designed primarily for use by an individual with a mobility disability for the main purpose of indoor, or both indoor and outdoor, locomotion. This type of wheelchair is self-propelled, and it is not assisted by the use of a battery or an auto propelling system. It is suited for someone who has control over his or her upper limbs. Our manual wheelchairs are not only designed for safety and durability, but also for convenience, comfort and performance. The lightweight and folding designs are convenient to travel and carry. The incorporate handbrakes are located at the wheel of the chair. It is very convenient for the person sitting in the wheelchair if he want to activate them when needed.
